

Dr. Quenzer leads initiatives for California Community College bioscience programs that help bioscience faculty deliver training aligned with industry workforce needs. She specialized in mass spectrometry and has experience working at a research facility that also provides analytical services to other researchers, and in industry, where she also hired and managed interns, mostly from community colleges (by choice).