Samantha Shelton earned her Ph.D. in molecular biology from the University of Texas at Austin, studying how RNA modifications impact transcriptional efficiency using a combination of next-generation sequencing technologies. She has held multiple roles at 10x Genomics, including in the Technical Support and Product Marketing groups. In her current role as a Science & Technology Advisor, she helps researchers design their single cell and spatial experiments.